

CHIEF EXECUTIVE

THE ASSOCIATION OF MEDICAL RESEARCH CHARITIES
LONDON WC1

£65-70,000 ACCORDING TO EXPERIENCE

The AMRC is an umbrella body predominantly involved in the charitable advancement of medical research in the UK and especially the advancement of the collective effectiveness of charities which have medical research as their principal activity.

This post is available because Diana Garnham who has held it with distinction since the foundation of the AMRC is taking a similar role at the Science Council in the New Year.

The key role for the CE is to lead the development of strategies, policies and activities of the AMRC by consultation and negotiation with outside agencies and authorities who have either a direct or support role in the world of medical research. It is a hands-on role, leading a small, strong team and, as a confident net-worker, interacting with and influencing senior members of the many communities to which the AMRC relates.

The successful candidate will be consultative, interactive and able to influence, and have good knowledge and experience of one or more of the sectors important to the AMRC: higher education and other bodies in the UK science base, the NHS (especially its R&D department), Whitehall, parliaments and increasingly the EU, and other charities. It is desirable to have an understanding of medical research and working knowledge of the UK charity sector.

Details of the AMRC and the job description are to be found at the website www.amrc.org.uk.

Please send your application by 25th October to our retained consultant, Clare Tattersall, at 1 Great Peter Street, London SW1P 3LL or claretatt@btopenworld.com. It is planned to hold final interviews in central London on 16 November 2005.

AMRC is committed to equality of opportunity.
